European Association of Fish Pathologists

The European Association of Fish Pathologists was established on 25th October 1979 in Munich, Germany. It is an interdisciplinary society, embracing all aspects of aquatic disease in fish and shellfish, in aquaculture and in wild stocks. Members come from all disciplines, biologists, microbiologists, veterinarians, fish farmers and aquaculture engineers. The objective of the EAFP is to promote the rapid exchange of experience and information on aquatic disease problems and related topics. These aims are pursued mainly through regular regional and international meetings, support for training courses in laboratory techniques and the publication of the EAFP Bulletin, a fully citeable journal listed in ASFA, Current Contents and Science Citation Index. The EAFP web site, www.eafp.org provides online access to the archive of EAFP Bulletins, information on the EAFP conference and other events. Main information on events, meetings and news relevant for aquatic animal pathologists are also available on the EAFP Facebook page.

The EAFP is served by a President, five Council members and a non-council post. The EAFP is organised into national branches, the activities of which are co-ordinated by EAFP Branch officers, who help to organise local meetings and report on local activities through the Bulletin.

Membership

Although the EAFP is based in Europe, it welcomes members worldwide and maintains close international contact through a network of Regional Officials. The EAFP has a membership of around 850 from 50 countries.

The annual membership subscription fee for 2018 is the local currency equivalent of:

Individual Membership	50 €
Student Membership	25 €
Library Membership	100 €
Sustaining Membership	400 €

Membership application forms, details regarding payment as well as details of your local branch can be found on the EAFP website: www.eafp.org

In the absence of a Branch Officer, membership applications should be sent to the EAFP General Secretary:
